

She Will

There was a little bird who sang too loud she didn't sing too loud but jealous people said she did but she kept on singing hoping somebody might hear while everyone around turned on their deaf ear she said they may laugh at me and say i'm wrong but what don't kill me will make me strong and when the truth won't talk she will

and when the lies don't fly she will
and when the time comes in for her to leave her window sill
she will

someday this sweet bird will fly away her stories will become music and words and no one will keep her down she knows how to wing it this is one songbird who knows how to sing it

she will find her voice and spread her wings someday and she'll sing every word she has to say
